Table 1 provides an overview of the social and medical model of maternity care. Graham and Oakley (1986) stress that the medical and social models' perspectives on maternity care do not just contradict each other; they can be in conflict. This is partly due to each professional group having a different system of values and attitudes through which pregnancy and childbirth is assessed (Graham ...

x Commonly reported incidence rates for endometrial cancer (EC) fail to take into account both the large number of hysterectomies performed each year and the dynamic change in hysterectomy rate over the past decade. Large racial differences in pre-menopausal hysterectomy rates between Black and White women in the US likely affect calculation of race-based risk.
